Creator: Private Collector.

Title: Black Film Promotional Material Collection.

Dates: 1915 – 1980.

Quantity: ca. 2,700 items.

Language: Danish, English, French, and German.

Historical Note

This significant collection of non-film promotional material documents how blacks were portrayed in films from 1915 to 1980.

Scope and Content Notes

The collection contains ca. 2,700 promotional items including photographic stills, programs, trade advertisements, advertising materials, advertising supplements, lobby cards, pressbooks, and posters, representing approximately 400 films, ranging in date from 1915 to 1980.

While most of the material is of American origin, there are a small number of programs printed in Denmark and the United Kingdom that cover rare titles. Likewise, there are rare fliers, lobby cards, photographic stills, posters, and pressbooks printed in Australia, France, Germany, Latin America, Poland, Romania, and the United Kingdom.

The collection contains important representative examples from the extremely elusive period before 1950: everything from BIRTH OF A NATION (1915) to CABIN IN THE SKY (1941) and STORMY WEATHER (1943); most of Paul Robeson's films; examples of Bill "Bojangles" Robinson and Joe Louis; and specimens of the "race" films made with all Black casts by small independent companies, including a number of pieces from the exceptionally rare period of the silent films of the 1920s. There is also extremely rare material concerning such early and legendary film pioneers as Lena Horne, Rex Ingram, Oscar Micheaux, Mantan Moreland, and the Nicholas Brothers.

Legendary film artists such as Harry Belafonte, Dorothy Dandridge, and Sidney Poitier are covered in great depth. Also documented are infrequent film appearances by Louis Armstrong, Pearl Bailey, Cab Calloway, Nat King Cole, Duke Ellington, Billie Holiday, and Eartha Kitt.

Popular titles such as NO WAY OUT (1950), CARMEN JONES (1954) and THE DEFIANT ONES (1958) IN THE HEAT OF THE NIGHT (1967), and GUESS WHO'S COMING TO DINNER (1968) are well represented. The classic 1970s era of Blaxploitation films is also covered in great depth.

While the holdings feature predominantly black North American film artists, black artists from other continents such as South America, Europe, and Central Asia are included.

The finding aid includes an alphabetical list of films by title that includes credits. The collection is arranged by format (see Series Overview and Description) and then alphabetically by film title.

Series Overview and Description

- Series 01: Film Stills – Original photomechanical-generated prints of visual images of actors, action, or production taken from films.
- Series 02: Galley Proof – A newspaper proof for editing before publication.
- Series 03: Pre-release Information Guide – A publication containing information about a film issued before its release.
- Series 04: Study Guides – Information designed to introduce a film to a classroom audience.
- Series 05: Press Kits – Materials used by mass media to promote a film.
- Series 06: Programs – A souvenir-like, descriptive publication.
- Series 07: Promotional Booklets – A publication that promotes a film.
- Series 08: Special Ad – A varied advertisement written to a specific audience or for a specific topic.
- Series 09: Trade Advertisements – Visually appealing and textual advertisements for a specific film that were sent to theater managers. They were often loosely laid in film trade publications.
- Series 10: Variant Trade Advertisement – A Trade Advertisement that promotes a specific film and details various contemporary films.
- Series 11: Advertising – Advertisements designed to illustrate the various formats of newspaper printing.
- Series 12: Ad Mats – Advertisements that were generally designed to be included in Pressbooks. They were occasionally printed separately from Pressbooks.
- Series 13: Ad Supplements – Advertisements from an altered publicity campaign after a film's release.
- Series 14: Broadside and Handbill – A broadside is a single-sheet advertisement primarily posted; while a handbill is a small, single-sheet advertisement designed to be distributed by hand.
- Series 15: Fliers – A highly visual, promotional advertisement designed for mass distribution by hand or by mail.
- Series 16: Lobby Cards – An American convention combining the photographic attributes of a still and the border decoration of a poster, usually displayed in movie theaters to advertise films.
- Series 17: Newsletter – A descriptive newspaper-style publication.
- Series 18: Promotional Brochures – A promotional publication describing the features of a film.
- Series 19: Academy Award Supplement – A Pressbook insert for an Academy Award film.
- Series 20: Supplementary Pressbook – A Pressbook issued after the original Pressbook.
- Series 21: Pressbooks – A promotional publication that contained illustrations and detailed articles concerning cast, crew, directors and plot synopses. They often contained Ad Mats and were used to advise theater owners how to promote a particular film. Pressbooks are no longer created. This Series has a section A and a section B, because there are two sizes of folders used to house the material. Each section is arranged alphabetically.

Series 22: Oversize Ad Mats, Oversize Ad Supplements, Oversize Pressbooks

Series 23: Posters – A large, colorful, promotional placard designed for public viewing and intended for hanging.
